

GRADUATE CERTIFICATE IN HISTORIC PRESERVATION

The Graduate Certificate in Historic Preservation (GCHP) fulfills the MUP Historic Preservation specialization requirements. It offers students an opportunity to integrate knowledge of historic preservation with their academic disciplines. It prepares students and professionals for careers in historic preservation related to architecture, landscape architecture, urban design, urban planning, history, geography, anthropology, museology and others. Students completing the certificate will be knowledgeable about historic preservation including history, theory, law, and policy, and be able to apply this knowledge in contemporary preservation practice. They will be able to examine historic sites using research methods and prepare preservation plans for a range of historic properties in both domestic and international settings.

The certificate is 18 credits which may overlap with MUP requirements and will appear on the UW transcript.

Students should request access to the preservation email list to receive quarterly lists of preservation courses by contacting histpres@uw.edu. The quarterly list also appears on Student Info page on the Historic Preservation program website.

Students must submit an application for the certificate on the program website.

Certificate Capstone

If the URBAN 508 studio (taught in Autumn quarters) has preservation content, it or another studio with such content may count for the certificate capstone requirement (but it cannot count for the MUP capstone requirement). Students can also arrange for a paper, report, or other project, or a preservation-related thesis supervised by one of the preservation program faculty, to meet this requirement. See the Historic Preservation program website for the faculty list.
